City of Boulder Partners with Elevations Credit Union for Employee Banking Services

BOULDER, Colo.— Boulder-based, award-winning Elevations Credit Union is now an employee banking services partner for the City of Boulder. Through this new partnership, the city will offer access to Elevations' financial services as an employee benefit.

"Elevations Credit Union has served the Boulder community for over 60 years supporting local nonprofits and, through its foundation, assisted impacted residents to recover from the 2013 flood," said Joyce Lira, Human Resource director for the city. "We're pleased to partner with such a respected financial institution in our own backyard and to offer our employees many of the financial programs enjoyed by other credit union members."

Beyond providing traditional products and services for city employees, Elevations will also support Health Savings Accounts (HSAs), community events, financial literacy, employee financial planning and other initiatives.

"This is a natural partnership of like-minded organizations," said Dennis Paul, vice president of business and community development at Elevations Credit Union. "We look forward to supporting the city and its employees in a variety of ways," Paul added.

Elevations Credit Union has established similar partnerships with more than 400 businesses and municipalities along Colorado's Front Range, including CU-Boulder, NCAR, NIST, Naropa, the City of Longmont, the St. Vrain Valley School District and more.
